

The Navajo Nation Department of Health Public Health Emergency Preparedness

Our mission: To support and strengthen the Navajo Nation's ability to prepare for, respond to and recover from public health threats and emergencies to save lives.

Who we are

- The Navajo Nation is the largest federally recognized tribe in the US and according 2010 census count, the number is well over 300,000 residing on 27,000 square miles of land extended into Utah, Arizona and New Mexico.
- The tribal land spans across three (3) states and thirteen (13) counties.
- The Navajo Nation is sectioned into five (5) agency grids established by federal agencies in the early 1900s. Today, it is also sub-divided into 110 chapter communities.

Our Culture

The Navajo tribe is the second largest Native American population in the United States.

We are widely known as the Navajo people but we refer to ourselves as Diné (the people).

Diné language is still spoken fluently, largely by the older generation.

There is a system of clans which defines relationships between individuals and families.

Diné spiritual practice is about restoring balance and harmony to a person's life to produce health and is based on the ideas of Hózhóójí.

Based on our oral culture and beliefs, Holy People put four sacred mountains in four different directions protecting their homeland. Our culture acknowledges four directions, four seasons, four clans and four colors that are associated with the four sacred mountains.
